GPE Industries Limited ("GPE") is a major manufacturer in automotive electronics. It manufactures high quality car audio products and automotive wire harnesses, primarily for the car industry. In related areas, GPE also manufactures specialty electronic products and high quality cables and cable assemblies.

In 1997, GPE diversified into the manufacture and marketing of high quality loudspeakers through the acquisition of the branded loudspeaker business and the Asian speaker manufacturing operations from its Hong Kong-listed parent company, Gold Peak Industries (Holdings) Limited ("Gold Peak"). To further enhance operational efficiencies, the company acquired from Gold Peak the parts and components business in early 1999.

GPE was listed on the main board of the Stock Exchange of Singapore Limited in November 1995. It has been granted tax incentives under Section 13(10) of the Income Tax Act of Singapore for an initial period of five years, allowing the company to enjoy certain tax concessions.

GPE is the regional headquarters as well as the holding company of the Electronics Division of Gold Peak, an investment holding company with a diversified portfolio of high quality industrial investments.

GPE's electronics, cable & harness and parts & components businesses are supported by an extensive manufacturing and marketing network in China and Hong Kong, and a strong distribution network in the ASEAN region. Its acoustics group also has a strong manufacturing base in the UK and Asia, and the branded loudspeakers are sold through a network of over 100 distributors worldwide. Excluding the associated companies, GPE Group is currently employing about 2,700 people, occupying a floor area of about 95,400 square metres.
The Group has established an extensive manufacturing and distribution network in Asia, the U.K. and the U.S.